

Documenting the Impact of Extractive Industries on Rural Communities

Background

The Centre for Natural Resource Governance (CNRG) seeks to produce a documentary highlighting the challenges faced by rural communities affected by extractive industries. We are therefore inviting Expressions of Interest (EOI) for this consultancy.

About The Centre for Natural Resource Governance

The Centre for Natural Resource Governance (CNRG) is a research and advocacy civil society organization working in Zimbabwe to promote citizen participation and good governance of natural resources for the ultimate benefit of communities that live in resource-rich areas. We defend the rights of communities affected by extractive industries. We have seen how extractive industries expose rural communities to an avalanche of rights violations which include land and water grabbing, water and air pollution and direct violence by a combined force of state and corporate power.

Scope of Work

To produce a 10–20-minute documentary showcasing the environmental, social, and economic impacts of extractive industries on rural communities. The documentary should:

- Highlight the vulnerabilities of rural communities to extractive industries.
- Expose environmental, social, and economic injustices perpetrated by extractive operations.
- Capture the grievances of workers in the extractive industry.
- Feature community voices and perspectives on mining activities.
- Amplify the concerns of surrounding communities on environmental and human rights issues.

General Information

Services/Work Description: Recruitment of a short-term Individual Consultant to Document mining practises and its impacts on rural communities.

Contract Type: Individual Consultancy

Duration: 15 working days

Expected Start Date: Upon signing of contract.

Qualifications/Expertise

The ideal candidate should be a qualified professional documentary maker with experience in producing high-quality documentaries on social and environmental issues. Required expertise, qualifications, and competencies, including language requirements

- Experience in video documentary production a must with at least a higher National Diploma in Video Production or related program
- Ability to work independently and organise meetings.
- Good understanding of mining impacts on communities.
- Strong research and excellent writing skills in English
- Demonstrated ability to meet deadlines and work under pressure.

Key Deliverables

The interested candidates should propose and outline a detailed work plan indicating the processes to be taken in pursuit of the task. The work plan will allow CNRG to follow through the plan and work being done by the consultant.

How to Apply?

Interested candidates should submit the following:

- Expression of interest to take up the assignment - separate technical & financial proposals (INVOICE plus a Tax Clearance Certificate)
- Company Profile.

Please send the above-mentioned requirements by email to info@cnrgzim.org and ensure that the subject line of your email clearly states the topic or position you are applying for documentary production.

Deadline for submission of the Application is 17 MARCH 2025

For more information, contact +263786913423